LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

Hon. CHAS. W. SEATON,
Superintendent of Census.

PITTSBURGH, PA., May 13, 1883.

SIR: I have the honor to forward herewith my report on the retail prices of necessities of life. This report may be regarded as supplemental to the report on wages, and is intended to furnish a portion of the information necessary to ascertain the true value of the rates of wages given in that report. Prices are given for the chief articles of consumption in families, such as flour, meat, groceries, dry-goods, boots and shoes, light, and fuel, as well as for board and house-rent.

As the wages tables cover a series of years and various sections of the country, the aim of this investigation has been to cover, so far as possible, the same years and the same sections of country. This has not always been accomplished, but it is believed that the tables in this report give prices from enough points in the country to make them fairly representative of the prices in the manufacturing districts.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

JOS. D. WEEKS,
Expert and Special Agent.

AVERAGE RETAIL PRICES OF NECESSARIES OF LIFE.

CHARACTER OF THIS REPORT.

In all considerations of the wages of labor, it is not sufficient to know the money rates paid to the different classes of employés for a given time or for a given unit of work, but there are other elements tending to increase or decrease the rates or earnings of the employé, or to limit and regulate their value, which should enter into the consideration. One of the most important of these elements is the prices of necessities of life.

The distinction between nominal and real wages is too closely marked and too well known to need any extended explanation in this report. Nominal wages are the amounts of money received by the employé from his employer for labor performed or services rendered. Real wages are the necessities, the comforts, the luxuries of life which these nominal wages will procure. It is evident from this definition that real wages may differ from nominal wages through various causes. Some of these causes, such as the regularity of employment, opportunities for extra earnings, methods or forms of payment, etc., are considered in the supplementary statements given in connection with the wages tables.

The most important, however, of the causes of difference between real and nominal rates of wages, not only at different times but in different sections of the country, is found in variations in the purchasing power of money. To show to some extent the difference between the nominal wages and the real wages of a laborer so far as the purchasing power of nominal wages is concerned, these tables showing the prices of necessities of life are given.

It is not always possible without an intricate calculation to arrive at even an approximate statement of the relation between the real and the nominal wages at a given time, that will apply to all sections of the country. For example, in the East the prices of certain necessities of life will be higher and of others lower than in the West. Groceries and dry-goods as a rule are lower in price on the Atlantic seaboard than they are in the Mississippi valley, while, on the other hand, the prices of flour and meat are less in the latter than in the former.

It is evident, however, that in this investigation all of such causes could not be ascertained. The most that could be arrived at was a statement as to the actual retail selling prices for various necessities of life in various sections of the country. Many minor matters which to some extent govern these prices could not be inquired into.

Prices were sought only for what might be regarded as the chief necessities of life. Some of these enter into consumption in all families; others may perhaps be regarded by some as luxuries, to be used at greater or less intervals, while some of the articles are probably not used at all in certain families. On the other hand, it is true that many articles not mentioned here are in certain families regarded as necessities.

PRICES.

The schedules used in collecting these prices presented no marked features that require their republication. They simply gave lists of the different articles for which prices were sought, coupled with a request to state whether the rates given were the average prices for the different years or for June 1. The prices, as well as the answers to this question, are given in the tables annexed.

The prices, with the exception of those for board and house-rent, are retail prices, unless otherwise specified, and are generally those that would be paid by workmen for such amounts of each article as would be purchased by them for use in their families. The rates for house-rent are the renting rates for houses of the sizes specified, while those for board are the average prices for plain board in the towns named.

Many of the tables give prices of necessities as far back as 1851, this being the earliest date for which such prices were asked. It will be noted that the reports from the Atlantic states, as a rule, give rates for more years than those from the states of the Ohio and Mississippi valleys.

In some cases the rates given in the various tables are average rates for the whole year, in others the rates ruling on June 1, and in a very few cases rates ruling at various seasons of the year without any statement as to the date. In a number of cases it will also be noticed that no statement is given as to the date in the year to which the prices apply.

AUTHORITY FOR THE STATEMENTS.

In all of the larger tables the authority for the reports is given. This is in almost every case some person or firm dealing in these articles in the town from which the report is received. In one case the report was made up from the columns of the New England Farmer, this being the most available source of information, and one regarded by the dealers in Boston in the goods quoted as fairly representing the prices ruling in that neighborhood for the years given.

COMMENSURABILITY OF RATES.

It would have been exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, to make all of the tables commensurable. The flour given in one table may be of a higher or of a lower grade than that in another, and the same may be true of the meats, dry-goods, boots, and other articles. To reduce to the lowest point the liability of error from this cause, that is, to have the quality of the different articles reported upon by the different establishments as nearly the same as could be secured, they were indicated by some short description, as "wheat flour, superfine"; "wheat flour, extra quality"; "fresh beef", "roasting-pieces" or "soup-pieces", or "rump-steaks"; "corned beef"; "brown shirting, 4x4, standard quality"; "Merrimaek prints"; "satinets, medium quality", etc. While it is probable that in the different tabulations the different articles are not always precisely of the same quality or grade, it is fair to presume that in a given tabulation the price of the same quality or grade of each article, as near as is possible, is quoted for the different years, as the report is made by the same person and of the prices at the same shop.

LOCATION OF SHOPS MAKING RETURNS.

The effort was made to have these returns of the necessities of life cover, so far as possible, the towns from which schedules of wages had been received.

The following table will show the location by states of the establishments or shops making returns for the several articles reported upon in the tables:

DRY GOODS.

Under this head there are 54 tabulations, giving prices for some of the staple dry goods, such as shirtings, sheetings, prints, etc. This list of articles might have been made fuller, had it not been for the difficulty of making a list that would have admitted of comparison without liability to error. For example, it would be of great interest could one know the cost of a full suit of workingman's clothes in each section and important manufacturing city, but the description is, in the nature of the case, so indefinite that to have called for returns under this title would have been to invite confusion and error.

GROCERIES.

Under this head there are 53 tabulations, giving the prices of tea, coffee, sugar, molasses, sirup, soap, and starch.

FLOUR, MEATS, PROVISIONS, ETC.

Under this head 83 tabulations are given, covering the prices of the chief articles of food, such as flour, meat, butter, rice, milk, and eggs. The list used could have been extended, but these articles of food are those in most common use, and most of them in use in the families of all classes of laborers.

It will be noticed that in the tabulations arranged under this head there are at least two classes of goods. One includes groceries and provisions, such as flour, salt fish, butter, cheese, milk, rice, etc.; the other includes only fresh meats. In most cases each tabulation gives returns for but one of these two classes, though in some tables rates will be found for both classes.

BOOTS, FUEL, AND LIGHT.

There are 44 reports giving the prices of men's heavy boots; 33 giving the prices of coal; 28 giving the prices of wood, and 35 giving the prices of oil.

Men's heavy boots were selected as one of the articles for which prices were sought as being that grade of boots most commonly worn by workingmen. It was also believed that the term would convey a more definite idea as to the grade and quality for which prices were asked than any term used for any other quality of boots or shoes in common use. It is evident, however, that the grade for which the price is given by different establishments is not in all cases the same.

Under "fuel" the retail prices of coal, both anthracite and bituminous, per ton of 2,000 pounds, and of wood, both hard and pine or soft wood, are given. These tables explain themselves. The great variation in the prices of wood in different sections of the country grows largely out of its scarcity in different localities.

In the table showing the prices of oil, the price of coal or carbon oil per gallon is given. In a very few cases prices are given as early as 1851. As the production of petroleum in Pennsylvania did not really begin on a commercial scale until 1859—the date of the drilling of Drake's well—and as the crude oil was not distilled for burning until after this, it is evident that the rates given from 1851 to 1860 must have been for something besides what is now known as carbon oil or kerosene. They are probably rates for oil distilled from coal or rosin.

HOUSE-RENT.

The prices given under "house-rent", as will be noticed, are generally for four- and six-room houses, in one case rent for a seven-room house being given. While the size of the house, the rent of which was asked, is given as four- and six-room, it is evident that four- and six-room houses vary greatly as to their conveniences, location, and desirability, and hence the probability is that in one section of the country a four-room house would mean a very different building from what it would in a different section of the country, though, as has several times been stated in this report, it is fair to presume that the returns from the same person would give the rent for the same or a similar house for a series of years, perhaps the character of the house improving with each year, or with each period of several years.

BOARD.

The tabulations showing the price of board per week explain themselves. The only statement necessary is that it was intended to arrive at the average price paid for good board in the various places mentioned. As a rule, the rate of board paid by women is less than that paid by men, though this is not always the case, the prices of board for both in a few instances being the same.
